Researchers from the University of Georgia's Institute of Gerontology are seeking volunteers for a study on how different carpet colors and patterns affect walking in older adults with and without memory difficulties.

This study is funded by Tarkett Flooring

Conducted under the direction of Stephen Correia, PhD, ABPP/CN

Who Do We Need?

- Participants who are 65-90 years old
- Have some changes in memory or thinking
- Can walk without a cane or walker
- Speak and read English
- Have not had a recent fall
- Can see and describe simple patterns

Possible Risks:

- Feeling uncomfortable answering questions about your medical history
- Feeling uncomfortable taking memory tests
- Feeling tired from walking short distances
- No greater risk of falling than everyday walking.

*No benefits are expected from participating
